OME dy ies to many women seem more important than health.

No matter how ill they feel, they drag themselves through the daily tasks and pile up trouble. This is heroic but a penalty has to be paid.

A woman in New Matamoras, Ohio, MRS. ISABELL BRADFIELD, tells in the following letter how she fought with disease of the feminine organs until finally forced to take to her bed. She says:

WOMAN'S DEVOTION TO HOME

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM-I feel it my duty to write to you to tell you that I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and think there is no medicine in the world like it. I suffered for nine years, and sometimes for twelve weeks at a time I could not stand on my feet. I had female troubles of sufferers. The wives and mothers of America are given to overwork. Let them be wise in time and at the first indication of female trouble write to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn. Mass., forheradvice. This advice is promptly given without charge. The present Mrs. Pinkham's experience in treating female ills is unparalleled; for years she worked side by side with Mrs. Lydia E. Pinkham, and for sometime past has had sole charge of the correspondence department of her great business, advising and helping by letter as many as a hundred

BLONDE FOUNDLINGS IN DEMAND Nine Out of Ten Foster Parents Select Golden-Haired Infants.

All those little children who hap pen to possess other than light hair and blue eyes are destined to stay i long time in the Home for the Friend less at No. 29 East Twenty-ninth street, says the New York Telegram. This home is filled with nice little girls who have brown bair and black eyes and black hair and brown eyes, but they are all passed by when the elegant women come to search for a child to adopt.

Why it is that childless women must have only the blonde variety of youngster the managers at the home are unable to say, but they declare this to be the case. Nine out of ten of the requests for children stipulate that the little one must be about "two years old, with curly blonde hair and blue eyes."

Perhaps it is because angels and cupids and all the light and airy creatures of fancy are usually pictured as being fuzzy blondes with sky blue And, of course, a woman who has never had any children is always looking for the ideal in this line.

Blonde children, however, as is well known by the experienced, are as prone to evil as the darker varieties. In fact, a blonde youngster can perform as much mischief in a minute as some brunettes can think of in a week. The little saintly blonde, with its wide eyes and open countenance, readily disarms suspicion and while you are engaged in praising and petting it, it is secretly planning an assault upon the raspberry jam or figuring out how it is going to break into the cupboard and carry off the custard

Blonde youngsters are more sly than brunettes, and though light of countenance they are dark plotters and schemers.

They will eat all the oranges in the cellar and make you think the rats have carried them off. They will break the bric-a-brac and lay it to the cat. They will dig up the garden and ruin the flower beds and so arrange matters that you will swear the neighbor's hens have been guilty of the depredations.

It is a strange thing how every mother is partial to her golden-haired darling. Such a mother may be a brunette and she may hate a blonde woman with all the dark intensity of her nature, but she will swear by that white-haired kid of hers and trust it

Only the neighbors can see the faults of the golden-haired darlings and these see them magnified a thousand times.

This is particularly sad inasmuch as the majority of homeless children are brunettes. In the home in Twenty-ninth street are 140 children, all nice little tots who would be glad of a good home and a foster mother's love. but they are destined to grow up without these blessings, for every woman wants a golden-haired darling and these are not such.

A Great Autograph Collection.

The owner of probably the greatest private collection of autographs in the world, Alexander Polonyi, has died in Vienna. His collection was so large that it filled the entire upper story of his house. Polonyi possessed the autographs of over 30,000 persons, not only of moderns, but of mediæval and renaissance persons as well. He was not particular as to age, religion, profession. All he stood out for was that the autograph was to be that of a person of certain historical importance. He possessed original writings which have not yet been printed of Michael Angelo and Marie Antoinette, letters by Calvin and Luther, Schiller and Goethe, pages of music by Wagner and Beethoven, original documents from the eleventh century, private letters of Canovas, old Hebrew scrolls, and sermons by famous Hussites. It was Polonyi's greatest pleasure to show his treasures to scholars and to bewilder them with the wealth and variety of the materials which he placed before them in the calculated disorder we have attempted to describe. He began life as an apprentice to a Leipzig book-eller. His greatest success was with a magnificent collection of Durer's drawings, which he happened on quite accidentally and sold to the Royal Gallery in Berlin for a prodigious sum of money. Polonyi had no scientific or historical knowledge, but he had a genius for collecting, and it was as a collector he was known throughout the world .- Leisure Hours.

In point of stature the rulers of today compare very unfavorably with their predecessors. Christian I., King of Denmark, was seven feet high. The present Danish king, Christian IX., barely reaches five feet eleven inches, and his son, King George of Greece, is four inches shorter. The same physical decline seems to mark the Czar of Russia. Peter the Great was a giant of six feet ten inches. The Czar of to-day barely reaches five feet six inches. The late German Emperor, William I., was six feet high, and his brother, Prince Charles, was but an inch shorter. The present Kaiser cannot stretch himself beyond five feet eight inches. The King of health which beset young men and the Belgians, with six feet four inches | women of the day is generally due to of stature, is the tallest of the ruling monarchs, and Queen Victoria, with four feet ten inches, two inches less even than the present Chinese Emperor, is the shortest. ._- ---

Fire Drill in Boston. We met with a single adventure the other night. Our friend Sonberger lives in the well-known apartment house, the Despondia. This house is one of a long' block, and Sonberger's flat is on the top floor. There was some delay about answering the bell. Finally a questioning voice was reassured and the door was opened. To our amazement we found Sonberger in pajamas, his charming wife in something soft, fluffy, bewitching, and little Harold in his night shirt and with a tin horn in his hand. (We have known the Sonbergers for years.) "For heaven's sake, old man, are you crazy?' we asked, with voice toward husband and appreciative, respectful eyes toward wife. Sonberger smiled a feeble smile. "You see, we practice the fire drill every night. We were just going out on the roof. Ever since those fires in New York we have been more or less timid, and Monday I determined that we should be in a state of constant readiness. Each night we pretend to be in bed. I turn on the light suddenly, shriek, 'Get up,' then we rush to the back door, unlock it,

Old-Time Words. Old words survive to a remarkable degree in north Derbyshire, and the country districts of Lancashire. Perhaps the most interesting is "Yah," which the rustics of the Peak frequently use for "Yes," and which they employed exclusively thirty years ago, when many of them had never seen a railway. Sounded exactly like the German "Jah," it is evidently a descendant of the Anglo-Saxon "Gen," and must, therefore, be more than a thousand years old. In Lancashire the commonest antiquity in speech is 'Gradeley," the meaning whereof is "Really, genuinely, thoroughly." Both counties are happy in the use of "Nesh" (Anglo-Saxon: Nesc), an admirable word, which ought to be reinstated in polite speech, for modern English contains no exact equivalent. It means unduly sensitive to cold, and is correctly represented by the French, 'Frileux."-London News.

Wounds Which Heal Rapidly. Wounds caused by Mauser bullets healed with wonderful and unexpected rapidity. The small frontage of these bullets caused lesions in the soft tissue almost subcutaneous in their nature and the wounds healed quickly and kindly. Frequently repair went on under a scab. Did Not Have to Lay Eggs. A young woman of Sheffield, England, came into a fortune and promptly hunted up a country house, where she played the role of chatelaine to the manner born according to her own ideas of the part. One day some of her old-time friends came to see her, and she condescended to show them all over the place. "What beautiful chickens!" exclaimed the visitors when they came to the poultry yard. "Yes. All prize birds!" haughtily explained the hostess. "Do they lay every day?" "Ohe they could, of course; but," grandiloquently, "in our position it isn't necessary for them to do so."

Remarkable Statues Discovered in Egypt Two of the most remarkable statues ever found were recently unearthed by M. Georges Legrain, a French Egyptologist, from the ruins of the temple at Karnak on the Upper Nile, in Egypt. One of these is in alabaster, and represents the great Theban god Ammon.

This alabaster god is eighteen feet high, and was originally made from one solid block of stone, the largest alabaster statue in the world. It was found in three pieces, which were easily put together. The artistic finish is perfect.

The second statue is one that was set up by King Usertesen I, in honor of his father back in the days of Abraham. On the lap of this effigy is a slab upon which are carved inscriptions proving the work's antiquity.

Accompanying M. Legrain when he made the discovery was Charles N. Crewdson, corresponding secretary of the Chicago Society of Egyptian Research, who is touring Egypt in the interest of the society he represents.

Origin of the Elevator.

The elevator originated in central Europe. The earliest mention of the elevator is made in a letter of Napoleon I., addressed to his wife, the Archduchess Maria Louise. He writes to her that, when in Schoenbrunn, then the summer residence of the Austrian emperor, near Vienna, he used the "chaise volante" (flying chair) in that castle, which had been constructed for Empress Maria Theresa. It consisted of a small, square room, sumptuously furnished with hangings of red silk, and suspended by strong ropes with counter-weights, so that it could be pulled up or let down with great ease in a shaft built for the purpose about 1760.

Bohemia's Strange Minerals. Not far from Trebitsch, in Bohemia, are found many glassy-looking objects, of a bottle-green color, and tending, when unbroken, to an egg shape, to which the name moldavites has been given. Doctor Suess, of Vienna, from a recent study of these curious minerals, concludes that they are really meteorites, and should be added to the list of foreign bodies that have found their way to the earth's surface by falling from space.

The Uses of Zinc.

The largest consumers of zinc are the manufacturers of galvanized iron work. Then come the brass founders, for zinc is an important element in brass alloys, and large quantities are used in the sheet form and as an element in galvanic batteries. Zinc is put under stoves and is used to line bathtubs. .

Great quantities of the ore are used also to make zinc white, or zinc oxide, for paint, but this is made direct from the ores and is not materially affected by the present rise of values, the zinc oxide having gone up only about half a cent a pound in price. Of this the United States imported at one time about 30,000 barrels a year. Now we can export it as we do the metal and ore. Our exports of the ore were only 48,000 pounds in 1895, but last year rose to 21,040,000 pounds, while our exports of pig rose in the same period from about 3,000,000 pounds to 21,000,000.—New York Sun.

One on Her Majesty.

The following story-for the truth of which, however, we are unable to vouch-is told of the Empress Frederick. When Her Majesty was last in England she purchased a quantity of very artistic wall-paper, which she had sent to her villa at Homburg. "This piece," replied the chamberlain, comes from Berlin, and the other from Magdeburg—'made in Germany, your Majesty."—London Chronicle.
